ABN Group sets its sights on transformation as a key growth driver

Leading Australian building company ABN Group has confirmed the appointment of former BankWest CIO Andy Weir to its advisory board. The appointment comes after an extensive search for an independent advisor with considerable experience in technology and business transformation.

The ABN Group is committed to a strong growth mandate through a business strategy focussing on customers and employees, supported by a significant investment in technology as a key enabler.

Mr Weir comes with a significant skill set and has extensive experience in digital customer experience innovation and business transformation and growth, with previous roles including CommBank's EGM of Bankwest Technology & Chief Information Officer.

"Andy Weir's appointment will help guide growth and transformation to support all aspects of the business" said ABN Group Managing Director Dale Alcock. "It will ensure our investment in transformation drives value for our customers, business and clients"

About Andy Weir

Andy Weir comes to ABN Group as a highly experienced C-suite executive and management consultant specialising in large scale strategic digital transformations, across business, technology and people disciplines.

Specialist focus areas include digital transformation, technology/business leadership, organisational transformation, cultural change, change management and operating model development.

Andy is the CEO and Founder of Tranxform Pty Ltd and was previously the EGM of Bankwest Technology (CIO), CommBank.
